In a world exclusive, the cry of Pope Francis to stop the war in Europe

Pope Francis wanted his pre-Christmas appeal for peace in Ukraine – in a book written with the Vatican specialist of ilfattoquotidiano.it, Francesco Antonio Grana – to be published exclusively for the whole world by TS Edizioni with the title Un'enciclica sulla pace in Ucraina (An encyclical on peace in Ukraine).

The book – also available as an e-book – will be in all bookshops and online stores on 5 December.

"A real encyclical on and for peace in Ukraine and everywhere else in the world." These are the words with which the Pope introduces his message to the world in this book, the last appeal to stop the spiral of violence and death in the heart of Europe. "A sort of war diary that I offer readers in the hope that it can become a diary of peace very soon," the Holy Father also writes.

The text recalls the attention to the duty of being men and women of peace, because nobody, in whatever role they are, can feel inured or indifferent to the horrors of war. And if the objective is "just peace", then nobody can excuse themselves from admitting that the arms trade must be stopped, that social injustices must be overcome, that cultural differences cannot become a reason for hatred and that the threat of a nuclear conflict can, in no case whatsoever, be put on the table of negotiations.

TS Edizioni holds the exclusive world rights for all languages and the book is already on auction with publishers in over 20 countries.

The author

Pope Francis (Jorge Mario Bergoglio). He was born in Buenos Aires on 17 December 1936. In 1958 he entered the Company of Jesus as a novice.
